Courtroom Connect Announces Partnership with DRI

(Atlanta, GA) August 21, 2006 - Courtroom Connect, the leading provider of advanced communication services to the legal industry, announced today that it has partnered with DRI – the Voice of the Defense Bar, to be the provider of videoconferencing, Internet service and video streaming to over 22,000 members of the nationwide organization of civil defense attorneys. DRI members receive special discounts on Courtroom Connect services, which can be used permanently within their own law firms or temporarily for legal events, such as trials, depositions, jury research, war rooms, and presentations.

“We are very excited about our partnership with Courtroom Connect,” said Tyler Howes, Deputy Executive Director of DRI. “The partnership will allow DRI members to receive a variety of Courtroom Connect services at discounted rates for use in their litigation practice.”

Products and Services

Courtroom Connect’s products and services include the Law Connect™ suite of Internet, videoconferencing, and streaming products for the law firm office as well as advanced communications solutions for legal events, such as trials, depositions, jury research, war rooms, and presentations. Attorneys can watch a trial remotely with Courtroom Connect’s video streaming service or have an expert witness testify remotely via a Courtroom Connect videoconference unit at court. Courtroom Connect also has a network of over 200 public videoconference rooms available for rent. DRI members can rent rooms at discounted rates to conduct depositions or consult with expert witnesses over videoconference, saving time and avoiding travel. Members also receive other discounts and special offers on videoconferencing, video streaming, and Internet service.

“We are proud to be working with the DRI,” said Louis Goldberg, COO of Courtroom Connect. “DRI is an elite organization of defense counsel, and our video and Internet services were designed with their unique needs in mind. Whether they are at court, in deposition, or conducting internal meetings and trainings at their office, Courtroom Connect provides DRI members with videoconferencing, streaming, and Internet services that keep them at the top of their game.”
